FARM WORK IS BEING DELAYED BY LATE SPRING

Adams county farmers are revising their planting schedules because of the delayed advent of spring.

County Agent M. T. Hartman today noted that many farmers, after two years of "early springs" are becoming impatient with the "on again, off again" character of the current weather, but advised them not to worry. "Even when planting is delayed for a week or two there is still a long growing season ahead."

While stating that "for the most part the season ahead looks promising," the county agent observed that the dry, cool and windy weather has dried out the soil so much that a long, steady rain is needed in most parts of the county.

Wheat and barley, which up to a few days ago did not look too promising, put on new life as a result of rains early this week, the county agent said. He added that the hay crop will probably be smaller generally this year than last, with the stands of grass drying light, partially as a result of dry weather.

The open winter will call for possible additional use of fertilizer, he observed. Because of the mild winter there was no upper crust of frozen soil, and no snow to act as a winter covering. As a result, Hartman observed, nitrogen was leached out of the top soil.

In general farmers were delayed in getting peas planted on the usual middle of March schedule, the county agent noted.

Tomatoes Delayed

Present indications are that tomato planting in general will be delayed about two weeks, and also that the number of acres scheduled to be devoted to tomatoes in the county will be increased.

The weather is causing the delay in the maturing of the tomato plants. Local plants have been held up by cool weather, and southern plants, many of which are purchased (Please Turn to Page 8)

YOUTH JAILED AS RESULT OF STUDENT CRASH

Wayne Clarence Hess, 133 Lumber street, Littlestown, was sentenced to four months in the Adams county jail today on a charge of failure to reveal his identity at the scene of an accident brought by state police after an accident in which three Dickinson college students were fatally injured. Sentence was pronounced in Adams county court this morning.

Hess told the court this morning that he did not know the Dickinson students' car had gone over the edge of the Bethlehem Steel quarries, near Hanover. He said he felt the shock of a car hitting but that when he looked up he saw the tail-light of a car some distance down the road and assumed that was the car that had hit him and that its damage was as slight as the damage to his vehicle. He said the first he knew of the car in the quarry and the deaths of the Dickinson students was when State Policeman Robert P. Brady told him several days later after he learned police were seeking him and he surrendered to Maryland authorities.

Others Are Jailed

Judge W. C. Sheely said that the sentence was imposed despite the fact that Hess was probably not responsible for the accident.

U.S. WATCHING FLORIDA VOTE

Miami, Fla., April 29 (AP)—The nation's eyes will focus on Florida on Tuesday as an expected 600,000 Democrats nominate their candidate for the United States Senate.

The May 2 Democratic primaries—which assure victory in the November general elections in this predominantly Democratic state—will conclude one of the most bitterly waged battles in Florida's turbulent political history.

Senator Claude Pepper of Tallahassee, a veteran of 14 years in the upper chamber, and youthful Rep. George A. Smathers of Miami are the principals.

But basic political philosophies more than personalities are the factors which have stirred an unprecedented interest among Florida's 1,000,000 eligible voters and the rest of the nation.

Pepper, one of the state's most controversial political figures, has campaigned as an advocate of more Federal financing, broader public services, increased old age assistance and a national health program. He repeatedly has linked himself with the late Franklin D. Roosevelt and the "New Deal" and labels himself as one of President Truman's staunchest "fair deal" supporters. Smathers, a Marine corps combat veteran who is serving his second term as a Congressman, advocates less deficit spending and more free enterprise.

Lewisburg, Pa., April 29 (AP)—Dr. Horace A. Hildreth, former governor of Maine, was inaugurated president of Bucknell university today with a plea for preservation of colleges in America, free from government control.

CONTEMPT CASE MOVES SLOWLY

Washington, April 29 (AP)—Senate Communist investigators handled with care today a proposal that Frederick Vanderbilf Field be cited for contempt for refusing to answer their questions.

Senator Tydings (D-Md.) said he won't take lead in any such move against the reputed Communist millionaire. Other members of the Senate foreign relations subcommittee headed by Tydings indicated they favor caution in seeking a citation against Field.

The Senate subcommittee is looking into charges by Senator McCarthy (R-Wis.) that the State Department harbors Communists and Red sympathizers.

When Field was before the committee under subpoena yesterday he flatly refused to say whether he ever has been a Communist. He also refused to come across with many other answers—generally on the ground his replies might incriminate him.

Committee Counsel Edward P. Morgan called Field's conduct "contemptuous" and formally asked the committee to consider citing Field for contempt of Congress. Such a citation would put the matter in the courts and could lead to a jail sentence and a fine.

Harrisburg, April 29 (AP)—Some 21 denominations from 700 congregations around the state were represented here today in the first statewide United Christian Youth conference in ten years. A thousand teen-agers from all parts of the Commonwealth divided their time among fellowship and recreation sessions and discussion groups.

Dr. Raymond Kistler, president of Beaver college, Jenkintown, was scheduled to address the young delegates at a rally tonight climaxing the big conference.

Eastern League

(By The Associated Press)
Hartford's George Crouse is fattening his batting average in the Eastern Baseball league at the expense of the Albany Senators.

He hit two homers and two singles last night to lead the Chiefs to a 15-2 victory at Albany. He drove in seven runs.

The Utica Blue Sox, in their home opener, staged a triple play in the first inning and then were shutout, 3-0, by the Binghamton Triplets.

At Wilkes-Barre, pitcher Johnny Masuga beat down late inning threats to defeat Scranton, 6-3.

Williamsport squelched the Elmira Pioneers, 10-3, aided by 14 bases on balls.

Approximately 58.5 per cent of the average Japanese families' expenditures is for food.

There are 333 American-built electron microscopes in use throughout the world.

BULLET RELAY TEAM 4TH IN SECTION RACE

The Gettysburg college relay ran fourth in the first section of the Middle Atlantic mile event against Alfred, Johns Hopkins, Swarthmore and St. Joseph's. Alfred was the final winner of the event with a mark of 3:25.4.

Philadelphia, April 29 (AP)—Reggie Pearman, who usually scores the finish line first in a foot race, is going to be sadly missed when he departs from New York university in June.

The slender, bespectacled negro did it again yesterday as he anchored a NYU quartet that raced to a intercollegiate record in the sprint medley relay championship at the Pennsylvania relay carnival.

The New York speedster gets a chance to help make it four straight for the Violets in the mile relay today. And again, as in yesterday's sprint medley, his chief opposition is expected to come from little Morgan State's Bill Brown.

Overcoming a 10-yard deficit in the home stretch, Pearman reeled off a 1:51½ mile to give NYU a record of 3:22.7 for the medley mile. The old record of 3:23 was set by a University of Oklahoma quartet at the Drake relays in 1942.

NYU's time also wiped out the Penn carnival's standard of 3:24.8.

Brown was so close to Pearman at the finish that Morgan State was clocked in 2:22.8. Loyola university of Chicago, winner of the first section in 3:50.2, took third place and Pittsburgh fourth in the final standings.

New York university's record shattering triumph was easily the highlight of the opening day program that saw the Violets also take an individual championship; Penn State score a double in the quarter-mile relay and the 120-yard high hurdles; Pennsylvania win its first major relay in 17 years and Charles Moore of Cornell turn in a new carnival record for the 400-meter hurdles.

Penn's triumph came in the distance medley. The time was a comparatively slow 10:09 but it was good enough to give the Red and Blue fans a chance to holler for the first time since 1933, when Quakers won the sprint relay.

Hagerstown quelled a ninth-inning Sunbury rally to win 10-9. The losers had the bases loaded and one man out before reliever Charley Higman retired the side.

Harrisburg, loser in its opener, scored its third straight victory last night, beating York 6-2 to retain third place behind Wilmington and Hagerstown. Bob Deeds pitched a five-hitter.

Allentown won its first game of the season routing Trenton 14-4 in a long game that lasted nearly three hours.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.
New York, April 29 (AP)—Naturally you can't blame a ball player for beefing when he loses a hit, or a homer, because the umpire yelled "balk" just as he swung. . . . It has happened several times this spring.

But Shag Shaughnessy, who knows the rules pretty well, maintains that Lou Boudreau's option suggestion won't work. . . . The reason, says Shag, is that as soon as the ump detects a balk, he holds both hands in an emphatic gesture.

The pitcher, seeing this, eases up so most of those hits are made off "fat" pitches with nothing on them. . . . Clark Griffith, who figures it will cost him $39,000 to have the Washington infield rebuilt to provide a regulation 15-inch mound, is campaigning to have that regulation rescinded. He got a special ruling to retain the old height this season.

Says Griff, who figures a lot of fingers will get hurt falling off the mound: "Personally I like to pitch off level ground. Maybe that's why I thought I had a poor season when I walked as many as 30 or 35 batters."

HE WOULDN'T ELI ABOUT IT
It happened when Rocky Graziano went to New Haven for last Monday's brief tussle with Danny Boy Williams. . . . Rocky, Manager Irving Cohen and Charley Brown of the New Haven arena were standing in front of the hotel when Brown pointed to some ivy-draped building and remarked: "That's Yale you like to be in there?" . . . Graziano looked apprehensively and replied: "Me? Never!" . . . When Brown recovered from his surprise, he realized Rocky was thinking of the kind of "college" east side boys go to when they get in wrong with the D.A.

Wilmington and Hagerstown are still unbeaten in Class B Interstate league competition today but barely squeezed through with one-run victories last night.

The Blue Rocks scored three runs in the seventh inning to come from behind and defeat the Lancaster Red Roses 11-10. The game was called at the end of seven innings because of Pennsylvania's midnight curfew.

Posthumous Award Of Carnegie Medal
Pittsburgh, April 29 (AP)—A 36-year-old Pennsylvania oil rigger who died in a futile effort to save two children trapped in a burning home has been posthumously awarded the Bronze Medal of the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission.

The hero was John N. Miller of Aquashicola, near Mauch Chunk. A passerby, he dashed inside a flaming house in an attempt to rescue Shirley Ann Arner, 2, and her brother, Alfred, 4. The youngsters were in an upstairs bedroom. Miller died with them.

Fourteen residents of seven other states were also honored with awards made by the commission yesterday, including two other posthumous citations. Georgia and Ohio led the hero list with four residents each; Tennessee had two while Texas, Virginia, Kentucky and Pennsylvania had one each.

Apology Fails To Reinstate Miner

Library, Pa., April 29 (AP)—Coal Miner Joe Dickmon, suspended by the United Mine Workers because he called John L. Lewis a dictator, says he apologized to UMW officials a week ago but still hasn't got his job back.

Dickmon's UMW local gave him a six-month suspension last January during the coal strike after Dickmon wrote a letter to a newspaper saying Lewis should be kicked out of the UMW presidency.

Dickmon complained the UMW didn't tell its members enough about the union's financial status. He appealed his suspension to the executive board of UMW district five and was given a hearing last Saturday.

"They showed me where I was wrong because financial statements are sent to the UMW secretaries every six months," Dickmon related. "I admitted that I had made false statements about Mr. Lewis and apologized. The board said it would help me get back on the job but my local hasn't met yet and the way the fellows are talking around here I don't think they'll take me back."

NAGY DEFEATS YANKEES FOR SECOND TIME

(By JACK HAND)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)
"Here's to Joe Page" remains Bucky Harris' favorite toast. Now the Washington manager celebrates Joe's home run ball, not his relief pitching.

Revenge must be sweet for the former New York Yankee pilot who was fired after just missing the 1948 pennant. For the second time in six days, his maligned Senators whipped Fireman Joe.

Steve Nagy, drafted from the Pacific Coast league for $10,000, turned back the world champions for the second time last night, 5-4. On top of that, he won the game with an inside-the-park homer off Page in the eighth inning.

Harris Picked Him
Page, of course, was money in the bank for Bucky in 1947 when he won the pennant and world series. In '48 Joe fell down. The Yanks missed and Bucky lost his job.

Nagy's success is a feather in Harris' cap. He saw Steve win 15 for San Francisco last year when he was managing San Diego. On his advice, owner Clark Griffith drafted the 29-year-old southpaw who failed in a previous trial with Pittsburgh.

Bucky waited until he hit the Yankee stadium to give Nagy his first chance. He started last Saturday and went all the way to grab a ten-inning decision. Last night was his second start.

Feller Wins Second
Bobby Feller, cut in salary and demoted to No. 2 boy on the Cleveland staff, is taking it out on American league batters.

Bobby squirmed on the bench while Bob Lemon took the opening day assignment—and lost. He didn't pitch the second game either. Manager Lou Boudreau waited until Cleveland went to St. Louis a week ago. Feller came through with a fine five-hitter, striking out eight.

Bob picked up win No. 2 yesterday, cutting down the onrushing Detroit Tigers with eight hits, 6-1. Last year Feller didn't win his second game until June 14.

Boston welcomed their "Penway Park cousins"—The Philadelphia A's—with a 4-1 win behind Mel Parnell. Not since Sept. 12, 1948 have the A's won a game at Boston.

The Chicago-St. Louis game in the American was rained out after 2½ scoreless innings.

Hiner Connects
Cincinnati finally got in the win column by whipping Chicago 3-1. It took Harm Wehmeier's two-hit pitching to silence Frankie Frisch's upstart Cubs who had swept their first three starts.

Ralph Kiner took matters into his own hands in the seventh inning with a two-run homer that gave Pittsburgh a 4-3 edge over the St. Louis Cards.

Curt Simmons pitched like the $65,000 bonus beauty he was supposed to be three years ago, when the Philadelphia Phillies downed Boston, 6-1, in a night game. Simmons gave only three hits and chipped in with two singles in the 14-hit attack that routed Johnny Sain.

Rookie Dan Bankhead came to the rescue of Don Newcombe in Brooklyn's 3-3 victory over the New York Giants before 39,090 night customers at the Polo Grounds. The game was decided in the third when Brooklyn chased loser Jack Kramer with a four-run blast. Duke Snider, who had three hits, sparked the big third with a two-run triple.

FIRE DAMAGES CAR
The interior of a 1941 model automobile owned by George Long was gutted by fire at about 8:45 a. m. Friday in the garage behind Long's home in the center of Bonneville. Members of the Bonneville Fire company removed the flaming car which was parked near a 200-gallon tank of gasoline in the garage. Damage to the car is estimated at about $250. Firemen believe that a short circuit in the car wiring caused the fire.

Today's Talk

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

REGRET NOT!

It is no easy matter to dismiss all our regrets. They keep popping up anyway. As we become wiser in the ways of the world, and our thoughts take on a liberal turn, we see so much clearer and that is what makes us wonder at the blunders and mistakes we once made.

It would be strange if we didn't regret many things in our life experience. It would mean that we cared nothing for growth and progress. The very fact that we can take note of our mistakes is evidence that we desire growth and improvement. But to spend valuable time in regretting is pure waste. How many are the excuses for having made mistakes and blunders!

Regrets should remain only as milestones, or markers, to remind us when we missed our way. Regrets are mere lessons. But lessons learned and passed to constructive enterprises. There is nothing constructive about habitual regretting. Regrets are like spilled milk. We have already happened, so why regret them?

Wendell Phillips, highly educated New Englander, once met the noted temperance orator John B. Gough and the talk turned to education. Gough regretted not having a fine education such as Exeter and Harvard had given to Phillips. But Phillips told Gough that he never would have been as effective as an orator had he been given an education such as he (Phillips) had. Gough had been educated the hard way, but he was so effective that he needed no regrets. He was one of the great lecturers of his day.

When we begin to regret this and that, we get very close to the self-pity stage, which is always dangerous. Regret nothing! Pass on. There is always so much to do right now and ahead. Regrets become a heavy burden, and the more they are harbored the heavier they become. We should be led by dreams and visions, not hindered by vain regrets.

Regrets are not always unfortunate events. They are often our best teachers. As when we regretted making a move that promised a big profit, but which later proved to be a great loss!

WEEDS

When first the sprouts begin to show,
This problem vexes me:
I find it difficult to know
Which flower, which weed may be.

They look so tender at the start,
So green each tiny spike,
That weed from flower I cannot part.

They look so much alike,
"Wait!" warns the neighbor gardener wise.
"Together let them be,
The weeds grow faster. Soon your eyes
The difference will see."

Not always is the difference plain Between what's right and wrong,
But wait—the good is slow to gain,
The growth of evil strong.

SPY TRIAL RASH SWEEPS MANY RED SATELLITES

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, April 29 (AP)—We've had some trials here involving spying in one form or another, or plots against the government. But—

The Russian satellite countries of Europe have had a rash of trials on similar charges, plus spying for the Americans and British.

Here 11 top American Communists were found guilty of conspiring to teach overthrow of the government. Sentence: 5 years each.

Judith Coplon, once a government worker, and a Russian, Valentin Gubitchev, were found guilty of spying against this government. Her sentence, 20 years. He got 15 years but was allowed to return to Russia.

Differences In Severity
Alger Hiss, once a State Department official, was convicted of perjury. He had denied giving department papers to Whittaker Chambers, former Communist. Chambers said Hiss was in a spy ring. Sentence: 5 years.

In Hungary this year Robert Voegler, an American businessman, and Edgar Sanders, a British accountant, were tried on a spy charge. Voegler got 15 years, Sanders 10.

Except for these two outsiders, the big treason-overthrow-spying trials in the satellite countries involved their own people.

Worth Remembering
Before going further, two things may be worth remembering:

1. When the Communists take over, they try to wipe out all opposition any way they can, as fast as they can. Therefore, the charges they sometimes make have to be divided in half, disregarded, or taken with salt.

2. But, at the same time, if the Americans and British aren't busy trying to find out all they can in the satellite countries, including spying, they ought to win the booby bonus. You can be sure the Russians are trying to find out all they can here, any way they can. For these reasons the charges made against people tried in the Communist countries are murky. You can't tell whether they're true or not, even when a defendant abjectly condemns himself.

15 Officers Die

All these satellite countries—Rumania, Albania, Hungary, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, Poland—have had trials since the war for alleged crimes against the government.

This week I asked the State Department people if they have any record of purge or treason in Russia since the war. They say they know of none. But maybe the method of disposing of the opposition in Russia has changed.

Moscow has announced in the past half year the deaths of 15 Russian generals and admirals. As one news dispatch said drily: "Some of them

The Ladies' Aid society of St. John's Lutheran church held its monthly meeting on Thursday evening at the church. The program, which opened with a song service and a responsive reading, was in charge of Mrs. Alvin Groft. Prayer was offered by the president, Mrs. Kenneth D. James, who also conducted the business meeting. Mrs. Edwin Harget presented the secretary's report. There were 22 members and two visitors in attendance. The birthdays of Mrs. John Spangler and Miss Evelyn Asper were celebrated. Guess packages contributed by Mrs. James Dutterer and Mrs. Lilie Shyroek were received by Mrs. Elmo Jones and Mrs. Norman Johnson. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Paul Hawk, Mrs. Alvin Groft and Miss Evelyn Asper. The date and place of the next meeting were rather young. Many of them were in their forties.

This may, or may not, indicate that Stalin and his friends are wiping out opposition. If so, they are acting more quietly than they did in the mid-1930 purge trials which left a long odor after them. At those trials, the last big ones in Russia, top military men and old Bolshevik friends of Stalin were knocked off or thrown into prison.

The committees in charge of arrangements for the Mother Daughter Covered Dish social to be held by the Loyalty class of St. Paul's Lutheran church Monday at 6:30 p. m. at the church, has announced will be announced later, but the following were chosen hostesses: Mrs. Clair Beamer, Mrs. Dale Stary, Mrs. Noah Strevig and Mrs. Ralph Wanz.

The recently re-organized Ladies Auxiliary of the Alpha Fire company No. 1 will hold its first regular meeting on Monday evening at 8 o'clock in the fire hall. A white elephant party will be held after the meeting.

The monthly meeting of the Littlestown Junior Chamber of Commerce will be held Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock in Schott's banquet hall.

At a meeting of the Advertising committee held Wednesday in preparation for the Summer Music Festival to be held June 4 on the Littlestown Memorial Field under the sponsorship of the Littlestown Junior Chamber of Commerce and the High School Athletic Council, plans were made to solicit the business men of the community for ads in the program which the committee will have printed. The chairman of the committee, the Rev. Frank E. Reynolds, said it is the intention of the committee to include pictures of all the participating organizations in the program. The next meeting of the committee will be at the call of the secretary of the committee, Paul Renner.

A hat social will be held in connection with the monthly meeting of the Abigail Kammerer Missionary society Wednesday, 7:30 p. m., at the church.

The committees in charge of arrangements for the Mother Daughter Covered Dish social to be held by the Loyalty class of St. Paul's Lutheran church Monday at 6:30 p. m. at the church, has announced that table service will be provided for all those attending.

Riding with Russell

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.
by FREDERICK C. RUSSELL
member S.A.E.

Things change. You used to find motorists under cars, but now it's pedestrians.

It's Still a Mystery
Fifty years of experience with automobiles may have brought the public around to complete acceptance of the value of personal motor travel but motor cars still are the most misunderstood of the modern mechanical marvels. What is generally believed about cars would drive engineers to distraction. It's just a gentle way of saying that your automotive beliefs may be costing you a pretty penny.

Notions range all the way from the belief that gasoline "explodes" inside the engine to the idea that modern engines are water-cooled rather than air and water-cooled. Comparatively few people know why it is necessary to have transmission gears. Mention the term "torque" to even those who have worn out a dozen cars and they'll think you are discussing something culled from aviation.

Gasoline won't even burn until mixed with air. Car engines depend for their power on speed, making it necessary to gear them down for starting and hard going. The car's springs are its real shock absorbers, and hydraulic brakes are still largely mechanical.

Still Riding It
Many a driver who knows better than to go along with his left foot poised on the clutch pedal actually is "riding the clutch" by not occasionally checking to see if there is sufficient free pedal travel. Unless there is about an inch of free movement of the pedal downward before the clutch starts to disengage, the clutch will wear excessively. It's one of those insidious forms of car neglect which really have no place in a well-ordered motoring family.

One For Good Measure
Sometimes hints need a little elaboration. Typical is the business of changing a spotlight switch without having to bleed the hydraulic braking system. This switch is located at the rear of the brake master cylinder, can be replaced without any particular fuss and with a minimum of loss of brake fluid. There are two catches in this, however.

One is that you must have the replacement switch immediately ready to screw into the cylinder. The other is—and this is important—the master cylinder's reservoir should be filled with fresh brake fluid before the job is begun.

Mechanic Joe Speaking
"I wish some of my customers who now know the value of using relays for the headlights, especially on old cars, would realize that the aging of a car can also affect the efficiency of the wiring between the generator and the battery. A hint of this is failure to keep a battery charged even though the generator is in top form, the battery is not deteriorating and the car is normally used so far as current consumption is concerned.

"You can have this circuit reversed if the car is worth the investment. If this is merely to be a makeshift you can use a by-pass circuit from the insulated battery terminal to the battery terminal of the regulator."

This Way To Trouble
There's enough trouble in operating cars without inviting it. Suggesting this observation is the case of a friend who, after fussing around the generator, accidentally left off the dust cover band. A lot of dirt then collected on the commutator, especially since the bearing had been over oiled and the commutator was getting greasy. At the shop they first cleaned the commutator with a cloth moistened with gasoline, and then polished it with a strip of very fine sand paper. In addition they checked not merely the brushes but the brush holders which so often become sticky.

Judging by the tense expressions on the faces of so many drivers motordom is badly in need of a moral lift. On way to encourage more relaxed driving is suggested by Eleanor Steber, star of concert, opera and radio, who always has a song in her heart when she pilots her own car. Miss Steber is an ardent motorist, often driving her own car to the radio studio or concert hall when on her way to a personal appearance. Of course she does not vocalize awheel, but her heart is attuned to the great melodies which she is called upon to sing, and she feels that this mental attitude goes a long way toward making her handling of the car more efficient, pleasurable and safe. Come to think of it, long-distance swimmers usually carry the pleasant rhythm of a waltz. So lighten your hearts with a song. It's one way to safety.

Well No Wonder
Gasoline consumption goes up at least 100 per cent when the choke is closed, so a partially stuck choke is a sure bet for low gas mileage. Loggy action of the motor is a tip-off.

Anything that affects the gas mixture is likely to bring on fuel detonation or "ping" as we say. One thing too many people overlook completely is the manifold heat control valve. If the mixture is overheated it becomes too lean, and pinging follows.

The idea that very low compression in just one cylinder will make it impossible to crank the car with the starter may seem plausible on first glance, but actually the low compression wouldn't do this. The engine still should start, just as it would if one of the spark plugs failed. That low compression in one cylinder would speed up the cranking and might increase compression checked and found to be all right. There is no valve sticking. All-whirling has been gone over. Points and spark plugs have been replaced. The skip is still there. I think it is getting worse. H. L.

Just A Warning Sign
Sticking of relay points which today are included in the voltage and current regulator is indicated when the pointer of the ammeter suddenly goes beyond the last mark on the ammeter's discharge side. This can also mean that there's a ground in the circuit, but the chances are in favor of the theory of sticking contacts. A corollary oddity is the fact that after such a condition the ammeter won't show zero when there is no reading to be indicated. Having been thrown against the stop on the discharge side the pointer is bent out of normal position.

So That's Your Trouble

Q. Even though I have disconnected the fuse of the electric clock on my car the thing runs. How come? N. N. McB.
A. The clock merely winds electrically. It will stop when it becomes unwound.
Q. Am getting very poor gas mileage on my car. Should I have the carburetor rebuilt? F. D. S.
A. This may be necessary, but why overlook the ignition? Check for late timing. Then there are all the other things to consider such as a slipping clutch, dragging brakes, overheating, poor valving, and so on.
Q. The engine of my car won't start like it used to. What does this indicate? G. K. H.
A. It may simply be due to your keeping the car in a heated garage. (Please Turn to Page 6)

Chapter 5

Magda was extraordinarily beautiful in her white tennis dress. She had a tawny tigerish beauty, incongruous with her slow voice and mild manner. Andrew played up gallantly, simulating an interest he did not feel. He realized that Mr. Hamlyn looked at his daughter with a pitying self-satisfaction of a very wealthy man who has one supremely desirable possession. He realized that never since she could walk and talk had she been refused anything she wanted, that she was interested in making that did not in some way reflect her own physical perfection.

"Mr. Nolan," she said suddenly, "I've been waiting for the first time and everyone, including her father, was silent, as though a queen had decided to speak. "Mr. Nolan, Mr. Blount was telling us about that little theater up in the country where you are going this week-end. Daddy and I thought it would be nice sometime if you could come with us, as you know Morton personally, and show us around."

Andrew looked at her apprehensively. Why did she want to go to Broadway? He was certain that she was not in the least attracted to him. He said evasively, "Well, I'm staying with Lawrence Morton, who lives there, so I doubt whether I'd have time."

"Oh, not this week-end, I'd like to see the first night of this 'Prunella' they're doing. We wouldn't bother you at all. We'd stay at a hotel, and just mope around, so long as you saw we had theater seats, and all that."

"I think it's a very good idea, Andy," said Mr. Blount heartily, and there was a ring of command in his heartiness.

"Of course," he said, summoning every vestige of his considerable charm, "I'll be very happy to show you around. I'll get seats for the first night of 'Prunella' and fix you up at a hotel. Broadway's lovely, and Morton's a wonderful guy. One of the most original men in the English theater."

"Magda wants to see this William Brady," said Mr. Hamlyn, frowning slightly. "He's just a young fellow, but she seems to think he has something."

Whatever gods governed the English summer had gone a little crazy that year. The sun shone, the plums ripened to purple clusters along the valleys, and the heat glowed from the yellow Cotswold walls with a glowing warmth that brought an atmosphere to the prim, sleepy village, and made Katherine realize how Shakespeare, bred and reared in the green fields, could lie among the meadow-sweet, dreaming of Venice and Genoa and the hot southern countries he would never see.

There was work to do—a play every fortnight, and rehearsals every day—and Katherine, not being a principal, was in every play. She was working all the time, carrying a banner, saying, "Did you ring, madame?" in cap and apron, shouting among the rebellious populace, frowning with a Greek chorus, carrying the gold and silver and leaden caskets as Portia's little page.

Katherine worked and lived in an unimaginable dream of happiness. Her skin became golden with the sun, and touched with little brown freckles, and her pallor colored like the heavy roses and the apples ripened against the south walls. She did not know whether she was in love with the countryside or with the work, or with Morton's brilliant teaching, and it was not until June was blazing through the green valleys that she knew she was in love with William. That knowledge brought an unknown ecstasy, and for the first time since she had left home, pain.

William had learned a lot from Morton. He had gained in range and stature as an actor as the season had gone forward. The admiring, interested and curious glances of passer-by no longer consciously pleased him; he barely noticed them now, accepting them as his right.

Standing at the door of the Red Lion, waiting for the doors to open and let them into the cool, stone-paved interior, were Morton and Andrew. Andrew, comfortable and correct in a light gray flannel suit, his lean, bony face already reddening a little in the sun, propped his broad shoulders against the ancient oak door of the inn while Morton, an enormous and picturesque figure, paced impatiently before the door, his black slug of an Aberdeen terrier gazing at his heels. Morton saw the meeting and watched it, and Andrew, watching him with amused affection, followed his gaze and watched too. As they looked, both men lost their awareness of themselves and each other, like people caught up, and enthralled in the action of a play.

Katherine stood on the edge of the pavement, her reddish-brown hair burning brightly in the sun. She wore a cheap little wash dress, belted round her thin waist, and sandals on her bare brown feet. There was something extraordinarily childish and hesitant about her as she stood there.

"So you engaged her," said Andrew delightedly. "That's the girl I told to read poetry to you. She looked like a cute kid."

Morton frowned disapprovingly at the expression "Katherine Best," he said.

"She's in love with him. Look at her," he said.

East Berlin

East Berlin—Mrs. Charles Cembé, who recently moved from here to the Dillsburg area, was a visitor this week at the home of the Charles Livingston family.

G. Elmer Nickey, who was critically ill several weeks ago, is slowly improving and able to be about although he is still under the care of a doctor.

Franklin S. Kunkel accompanied by Raymond L. Hoffman, Sr., attended the oil burner show in Philadelphia this week.

William L. Eisenhart, R. 2, who has been ill for several weeks, is reported much improved.

The Loyal Sons and Daughters class of Zwingle Reformed church school is conducting a chicken pie supper and refreshment sale today at the church annex for the benefit of the church redecoration fund.

C. E. Moo, an attaché of the York post office, visited here this week. Dotty, five-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard L. Myers, has been confined to her home by illness this week.

Mrs. James L. Myers had as Sunday guests her son-in-law and daughter, Dr. and Mrs. Samuel J. Leicy, York, at whose home she spent the winter.

Mrs. Bessie Joseph, who was confined to bed for more than a month with a serious heart ailment, can now be about on one story of her home although the may not travel stairs as yet.

Famela Jane Oberlander, six-year-old daughter of Mrs. Melvin C. Eisenhart, has returned to her mother's home after a recent visit to York relatives.

Mr. Strayer was treated during the past week for a painful infection of his arm for which a doctor administered penicillin.

L. Guy Kuhn, Conewago township justice of the peace, who has been a frequent visitor here at the home of his cousin, Mrs. Augustine J. Tierney, and family, has recovered from a recent illness due to an influenza attack.

Ruth Ellen and Philip, children of the Rev. and Mrs. Alton M. Leister, are recovering from recent illnesses that confined them to their home at the Reformed parsonage.

Clifford M. Barnes, Sr., who has had a position as a welder in Hanover, has resigned it so as to devote full time to his welding shop in the rear of his home at the west end.

Exhibits of student work and entertainment by the dramatic club of the borough were a part of the "open house" program given at the meeting of the Conewago Jointure Parent-Teachers association at the local high school building Tuesday evening.

Harry L. Taylor, R. 2, is recovering from a severe injury to a finger of his left hand which was caught in machinery at the York plant where he is employed. Mr. Taylor has been away from his duties for several weeks due to the accident.

Pfc. Walter Dean Barnes, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford M. Barnes, has been sent to Fort Knox, Ky. by the army in which he has served for some time. His brother, Guy, in the navy, remains at Patuxent River, Md. Both visited their parents recently.

New Oxford

New Oxford — Women of the National Council of Catholic Women conducted a public card party at the parochial hall Wednesday evening for the benefit of the church, and another public card party is to take place next Wednesday evening at the parochial hall by the men of the Holy Name society of the Catholic church to aid the fund to finance the building of the grotto in the Catholic cemetery. The parish has been solicited for aid in presenting the card party.

Ervin J. Baker, Pine Run farmer, was the sole winner of the recent puzzle contest sponsored by Hemminger's drug store. Although prizes were provided for five winners, Mr. Baker's answer was the only correct one received by Dr. Hemminger. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph W. Hamme, Hanover, were recent visitors to this section.

George A. Haar spent a day in Hanover during the week.

The Men's Brotherhood of St. Paul's Reformed church of which the Rev. Archie C. Rohrbaugh is pastor will conduct a baked ham supper for the public in the middle of May. The men conducted a successful oyster supper several weeks ago for the public.

Trenches have been dug this week in a portion of Center Square for sewer operations.

Local students are prepared to participate next week when the band of Delone Catholic high school, McSherrystown, will present a "music festival" for the public at the school building.

Mrs. Henry Haar, Pine Run, is still reported to be suffering from the effects of a fall which fractured her hip nearly two years ago. Mrs. Haar, who was hospitalized for several months after her accident, still experiences difficulty in getting about.

Television tubes now range in size from 3 inches to 30 inches in diameter. Engineers say they can even be made larger.

History Of Adams County Schools

By W. W. EISENHART

The third installment of Mr. Eisenhart's history of schools in Adams county follows:

The Academy

While the common school was developing, another type of "pay" school, at the level of secondary education, was gradually evolving. By the middle of the eighteenth century, the old Latin grammar-school curriculum, which hitherto had dominated secondary education, was no longer considered adequate in meeting the needs of youth in a democratic state, hence a tendency to offer more practical studies began to manifest itself. The result was a gradual dying out of the Latin school and the evolution of the Academy. Illustrative of the demand for a more practical type of education, was an "Industrial School" opened in Gettysburg by Anne Corry in 1801; it offered courses in sewing and flower-making.

Academies spread rapidly between the years 1800 and 1850; they dominated secondary education until the latter date, but continued prominent even after the Civil war. They were less aristocratic and exclusive than the older types of "pay" schools, especially those established to prepare pupils for college; and they were more democratic in that they were open to all. "The most characteristic features of the academies were their semi-public control, their broadened curriculum and religious purpose, and the extension of their instruction to girls."

Some academies were chartered either by the state or by the county. The commonest subjects included in their curricula were algebra, astronomy, botany, chemistry, general history, United States history, English literature, surveying, intellectual philosophy, declamation and debating.

Academies usually admitted pupils who had completed the English education of the common school, and "trained them with a view to rounding out their education and preparing them for business life and the professions." Pupils paid regular tuition fees which, together with other sources of income, helped finance their establishment and maintenance. For some years they received state subsidies annually.

Cites Examples Here

The academy movement influenced Adams county's "classical" schools, but did not result in the establishment of academies within the county's boundaries before the first half of the nineteenth century. Some of the early "classical" schools avoided the use of the word, academy, but they functioned during their later existence in the spirit of the academy.

Examples of secondary schools that flourished in Adams county during the first half of the nineteenth century include the following:

Gettysburg academy was established in 1801 by the Legislature of Pennsylvania. Half of an appropriation of $2,000 was given to help defray the cost of a building; the remaining half was to be used to pay the salaries of teachers. The act stipulated further that indigent children, not to exceed four at any one time, were to receive instruction gratis. The academy building was a two-story brick structure containing four rooms and was located at the southeast corner of Washington and High streets. In 1827 a classical school was opened in the building, its purpose being to prepare young men for entrance to the Lutheran Theological seminary. After two years, this school was discontinued, thus bringing to a close the career of the academy. Henceforth the school was known as the Gettysburg gymnasium, with scientific and classical courses. After 1832 this college preparatory school became Pennsylvania college. Between the years 1856 and 1871 the building housed the Gettysburg Female institute.

In 1826 Jacob Gardner and Thomas Stevens donated a lot of ground in Petersburg (now York Springs) for the purpose of establishing an academy. Six years later (1832) an academy was opened in Littlestown; it was called Edge Hill and one of its most prominent teachers was W. E. Krebs. The school rendered distinguished service till 1890.

Opened In 1829

The Gettysburg Female academy was opened in 1829 in the Wills building on Center Square by J. H. Marsden; later it was moved to the site of the old Eagle hotel on Chambersburg street, and from there to the Gettysburg academy building, corner of Washington and High streets, where it remained until 1871 when it was discontinued. The school changed principals and teachers during the period of its functioning repeatedly, no less than 10 persons having served either as principal or teacher.

About 1831 a group of men, among them Thaddeus Stevens, bought stock at $25 per share in order to raise the money to finance the erection of a building intended to house the Gettysburg Male academy. The building was located on Carlisle street, at an alley not far from the Western Maryland railroad crossing. It appears that the academy was never opened, as the building was used as a public school between the years 1832 and 1837.

During the year 1820 the Misses Mary and Catherine Lackey (Lecky) became interested in the Gettysburg Female academy which had been opened in 1829 by J. H. Marsden. They donated a lot of ground on High street to be used as a site for the academy. In 1831 a board of trustees began the erection of a one-story brick building intended to house the school; it was ready for occupancy in 1835, but it appears never to have been used by the academy. In 1838 the building was rented by Gettysburg school authorities for public school purposes and was so used until about 1857 when the present public school building on High street was built. After the latter date the one-story brick building, located next to the Adams County Free Library building, housed a Select school taught by Mary McClellan from about 1861 to 1878; again from 1880 until 1887. The building is now used by the American Red Cross.

In 1841 Herman Haupt announced the opening of a "Select Academy for Boys." He was a graduate of West Point Military academy. The building was located on Oak Ridge and the Fairfield Road. In 1843 it was called the Oak Ridge Select academy. The school did not seem to prosper as Haupt is listed as one of the principals of the Gettysburg Female academy in 1845.

School At Hunterstown

An English and Classical school, founded by Rev. I. H. Hays, was located at Hunterstown, Pa. It opened in 1851 and its first principal was John H. Clark. The school functioned a number of years, graduating young people who served the county in various capacities in later life.

New Oxford Collegiate and Medical Institute was established shortly before 1846 by Dr. M. G. D. Pfeiffer, a graduate of the University of Heidelberg, Germany. The late John M. Wolf of Hanover, Pa., who attended the school in 1846, says that he saw one of its teachers teach children, eight years of age, to read by use of phonics and the word method. This school also arranged for rooming and boarding pupils in private homes of the borough, when desired. The report card issued to one pupil of the school at the close of the winter session in 1848 lists the following subjects studied: English, writing, geography, arithmetic, geometry, algebra, composition, declamation, history, zoology and Latin; the report was issued by V. Sheer, and approved by M. D. G. Pfeiffer, founder of the school.

Sisters Opened School

It appears from Wolf's statement and from the report cited that the school offered both elementary and secondary education courses. There is evidence also that courses of collegiate grade, as well as training for the medical profession were provided by the college. The school building was situated on the south side of the present Lincoln Highway near the site of the William Aiwine home. It was discontinued shortly after the close of the Civil war.

In 1834 the Sisters of Charity opened a school in McSherrystown whose educational objective was to provide training for young ladies. In 1854 the school was incorporated as the McSherrystown Novitiate and Academy of St. Joseph whose sisters were put in charge of the school. Since then the school has added other phases of training from time to time, thus carrying out the original purposes for which it was founded.

The academy movement had, to a large extent, run its course by the close of the Civil war. Some academies continued to function thereafter, but, for the most part, operated at a financial loss; one reason being that the Commonwealth had quit subsidizing academies in 1843. In 1864 only four of the 30 academies had had previously received aid were still receiving aid from the state. By the opening of the twentieth century, academies had all but disappeared from the scene of action.

If the engine still starts under the same set of conditions then check the automatic choke control which on this job is hooked up with the fast idling control. You'll need a good carburetor man for this one.

Q. Why is it that the top speed of my car on the same hill has dropped from 55 to 35 in high gear? I do not notice any difference in the car's behavior on level roads or slight grades, but on hills something is wrong. I've checked the ignition. It isn't late. The engine seems to be running all right, but no power.

A. In a case of this sort there's good reason to suspect clutch slippage.

Q. After a collision I seem to be having trouble keeping my car running in a straight line, especially when traveling over a rough street. Front-end alignment has been checked. J. D. Jr.

A. There may be a broken rear spring or a bent frame. Mr. Russell will answer questions regarding the safe care and operation of your car. Just address him at 254 Fern street, West Hartford, 7, Conn., and enclose stamped, self-addressed envelope for a personal reply. There is no charge.

Washington, April 29 (AP)—Mayor William E. Kemp of Kansas City told senators Friday that Charles Binaggio may have been slain because he was unable to deliver on a promise that the city would be thrown wide open to gambling.

Kemp said "some lawless elements," including Binaggio, had entertained "high hopes" they would be able to influence the police department to let gambling run wide open because of some appointments made by the governor to the city police board.

Harrisburg, April 29 (AP)—Valley Forge general hospital will be put into service within two months if it is turned over to the state by the Defense department, Dr. Norris Vaux says. "There would be very little we would have to do to put it in shape to meet our requirements," the State Health secretary said yesterday.

for planting in the county, have been hard hit by frost. As far as can be determined now much of the tomato planting will be done toward the end of May, instead of during the first half of the month, which normally is the time for placing tomato plants, Hartman said.

Cherry Spray Letter Out

The county's fruit growers for the most part have been able to keep their spraying schedules up to date and the situation in the orchards looks promising. The county agent Friday sent out the second sour cherry spray letter of the year, urging a spray just before the blossoms open, or just as the first blossoms open to prevent infection by cherry leaf spot. A heavy carry-over of the leaf spot fungus has been found on old cherry leaves in most orchards this spring, Hartman said. He urged generally a Bordeaux of 1 1/2 pounds copper sulfate and three pounds fresh spray lime in 100 gallons of spray. Where leaf spot defoliation occurred in 1949 the growers should increase the Bordeaux to 2-6-100. Lime sulfur, in the proportion of two gallons per 100 gallons of spray, may be used instead of Bordeaux, the county agent said, but added that in 1949 lime sulfur caused considerable petal browning and leaf stunting. He urged cultivation in the orchards to destroy leaf spot fungus carried over in the old leaves.

Noting that in general the farming picture is "satisfactory at present," Hartman urged growers to recognize the late spring and the type of weather we have and to act according to the weather conditions, rather than plant simply according to the date.
